"HOODOO" STILL WORKING IN THE McNAMARA TRIAL.

Brother of a Juror Dies and Partner of Defense Attorney Taken Suddenly Ill Today.

United Press Telegram.
LOS ANGELES, Nov. 25.—What the superstitious called another manifestation of the hoodoo which has been hovering over the McNamara trial today forced its admission of the court until Monday.

Charles Sexton, brother of juror James J. B. Sexton who has been suffering from tuberculosis, died unexpectedly today and the juror was sent to his home accompanied by a doctor. He will remain until after the funeral.

At the same time Attorney Davis, for the defense, announced that his partner, Judge Russ, had been taken suddenly ill. Judge Russell on this morning sent out a request to the memory of Sexton's brother, ordered an adjournment.

The court in the McNamara trial decided that two reserve jurors should be drawn. The defense alleges this is unconstitutional, and says that if two men are substituted for regular jurors it will furnish grounds for an appeal to the United States Supreme Court.

The trial was resumed today with three vacancies in the jury. The defense continued its interpretation of Colin O'Connell, the retired millionaire Pittsburgh merchant. Collins declared the union was a menace to the nation; he stated that he could give a fair verdict.

THE REAL TEST

Of Herpicide is in Giving It a Thorough Trial.

There is only one test by which to judge of the efficiency of any article and that is by its ability to do that which it is intended to do. Many hair removals may look nice and small now, but the point is—do they eradicate Dandruff and stop falling hair?

No, they do not, but Herpicide does, because it goes to the root of the evil and kills the germ that attacks the papilla from whence the hair gets its life.

Letters from prominent people everywhere are doing just what Newcomb's Herpicide stands for, "test of use."

It is a delightful dressing, clear, pure and free from oil or grease. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. One dollar bottles guaranteed; Graham & Co., Special Agents.

Fashion Approves Striped Fabrics This Winter.

Paris is mad over stripes. Even fur coats have the pelts cleverly arranged to give a striped effect, and for tailored wear two-toned wool mixtures showing a stripe in the weave are much more fashionable than plain cloths.

The black and white striped suit illustrated with an orsaker over a black velvet petticoat and coat trimmings of white cloth and black velvet is the last cry in French cloth.

How They Manage It in London.
Golf players are as much of a necessity to the London coster girl on her outings as are the pearl buttons to her masculine companion, and the big trimmed hats with their drooping feathers are familiar in all gatherings of this class. Many of the girls cannot afford to keep their money tied up in useless plumage, and there thrives a brisk industry in the hiring of these feathers. The loan of a single plume for a day costs a quarter, or for a dollar a gorgeous trio may be had for an outing, to be returned promptly the next morning.

Weather conditions cause the terms to fluctuate somewhat, since a wet or foggy day will take the curl out of the feathers and make rearing necessary, for which 'Arrier has to pay an extra quarter—Tip-It.

Here's Way to Sew Hooks and Eyes.
To sew on hooks and eyes evenly take needle just the length of the distance apart you want your hooks. Make eyes with double thread by taking two stitches at same place with the width of the hook, buttonhole the stitch and run needle between the material just the length of the needle to make the next, and so on. Sew on hooks a needle length apart and you have them all even.

Development Exercise For the Arms.
Let your arms hang loosely at side, then take a deep full breath, close hands tightly, flex elbows and bring fists to shoulders, moving only the lower arm and relaxing the movement partly. Next, with fists held at shoulder, bring the elbows slowly out and up to the level of the shoulder. The third part of the movement is to carry the fists close under the armpits and back as far as possible, crossing them high up on the back, then letting arms fall slowly to sides. Every movement should be repeated.

THE UNFAIRNESS OF THE FORTY-MILE RADIUS.

The Pittsburg coal operators charge that the railroad discrimination against their region is not confined to Lake coal shipments, but that it includes Eastern and Western shipments, also. They allege that the Greensburg district, but thirty-five miles eastward, is given a rate of 15 cents per ton less than is charged the Pittsburg district.

It is also a part of the testimony that the Pennsylvania Railroad Company owns the Keystone Coal Company, one of the chief beneficiaries of this practical rebate. It does not appear, however, that this assertion is backed up by any further evidence than the bare statement of the witnesses. The Keystone Coal Company is reported in this region to be owned principally by the Huffs. It was organized and for many years more or less actively managed by George Franklin Huff, then a close friend and ardent supporter of the Pennsylvania railroad, and according to railroad custom at that time in position to merit substantial favor in the matter of freight rates. It is possible that the favor was at that time extended and has remained undisturbed for the reason that the Keystone company has under its benign influence made extensive developments and built up a large eastern trade, whose long-haul represents considerable revenue to the Pennsylvania's main line.

As we have heretofore stated, however, equitable freight rates should be computed on the ton-mile basis and regulated accordingly. Traffic zones are perhaps permissible if they are not too broad. "The Pittsburg radius" is an example of a common form of discrimination. Within a radius of forty miles the freight rates are the same as those out of and into the city of Pittsburg. The railroad company registers rubs elbows with this forty-mile radius, but it is not within it and does not enjoy its rates, nor does any of our many manufacturing industries in Connelville and the coke region. A part of the Pittsburg coal region is within the radius and a portion is without. Certain Washington county mines are within the magic circle and others near the Greysburg county line, and all the rich undeveloped Greene county coal, are arbitrarily discriminated against.

The forty-mile radius is forty times unfair and should be torn to its favoritism by the regulating powers.

POSING AS THE FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE.

The defense of the carriers in the Pittsburg coal rate case took a new tack yesterday, when the railroad attorneys wanted to know whether the low freight rates from the West Virginia regions have not made coal cheaper to Lake port and North-western consumers.

This was frankly admitted by the Pittsburg operators, but they countered upon the railroads by declaring that the burden of this happy condition in the consumer territory fell upon them alone, and that the railroads had in no wise contributed thereto.

They might have added that the railroads are now openly desirous of increasing the West Virginia rates rather than lowering the Pittsburg rates. This does not argue any sympathy for the consumer, and the attempt of the carriers to pose as the particular friend of the people was lamentably lame.

A NEW COMBINATION IN RESTRAINT OF TRADE?

The United Mine Workers are reported to have announced that they are desirous of the Western Federation of Miners. This is a union of conflicting interests which will come to no good end. The Western Federation is composed of gold, silver and copper miners, having nothing in common with the United Mine Workers, which is composed wholly of coal miners, and whose industrial interests have no immediate or sympathetic relation with those of the western miners.

Then there is the danger of forming "a combination in restraint of trade." The Government is sternly restricting the movements of Capital along this line, and it is only fair to assume that it will adopt the same policy with regard to labor.

The Governor of Oregon won't permit any more hangings during his term. He announces himself as a Commuter on the Hope line. Whether this under-haunted and optimistic official will give medals to murderers after commutative their death sentence is not stated, but the announcement would not be surprising.

It looks like football weather.

A Scotland pastor is embarking upon a benevolent work on his own account. Perhaps if all the pastors would follow his example, there would be no need of gospel tents and spectacular religion, and the resources, financially and morally, of our towns would be conserved to themselves.

The Pennsylvania railroad has after 55 years, actually made a change in its schedule on the South-west branch. It is true that the change is trifling, but it is noteworthy.

less encouraging. It presents the rose-hued hope that the Pennsylvania will some time in the distant future provide Connelville with a train service that will encourage its people to patronize the road with greater liberality than they now do.

Hunters continue to hunt themselves and often with fatal effect.

Henry Clay Bonville, Jr., confessed at last. There was no miscarriage of justice in his case. He got just what was coming to him. Virginia Justice is to be congratulated upon its unerring accuracy and its prompt execution.

Connellsville is reported to be widely interested in football. It is to be hoped that the Connelville team will justify the interest and the hopes of its enthusiastic admirers.

The Chief of Police of Connelville has lost his gun, but not his grip.

Westmoreland county is reported to be suffering from an epidemic of broken jaws, but there is no information to the effect that lion parties have been any more numerous than usual.

Fairbanks hopes to resume her transparent industrial activity.

A Johnstown newspaper reporter attempted suicide. He probably didn't understand that a newspaper reporter is not expected to get everything that happens, but just most of the things.

Two changes in the Pennsylvania railroad schedule is too much.

The construction of Connelville's federal building has actually begun, but the construction of the new fire department building still baffles. It took a long time to get the postoffice building started, but it won't take quite as long to construct the fire department building. There will be objections to it, of course, but it will be built, and promptly, too.

The Morgan Valley seems to be falling both physically and industrially. The Valley perhaps needs a Chamber of Commerce and a Board of Trade.

The moving picture shows won't be able to get any insurance if they don't behave better.

The West Penn betrays an ambition to annex Johnstown, and connect it up with the Connelville coke region. Connelville will have no objection, and Johnstown will no doubt be content.

Politics and Politicians. Nehemiah D. Smury, who has just died at his home in New Haven, Conn., was the latest member of the national house of representatives at the time of his retirement a year ago.

In announcing that he would be a candidate for a third term, Governor Donaghy of Arkansas, would make the future question the paramount issue of his campaign.

"Daisy" Dunn, a former newsboy, is pretty sure of retaining his present job as mayor of Williamstown, Conn. Mayor Dunn is a Democrat, but he appears to be very popular with the Republicans as well. When the Republican city convention met the other day it named Mr. Dunn as its candidate for mayor, and all declined the nomination. The convention withdrew without nominating an opponent to Mayor Dunn.

Your Out-of-Order Stomach
Will Feel Fine in Five Minutes.

Every year regularly more than a million stomach sufferers in the United States, England and Canada take Fape's Diapepsin, and realize not only immediate, but lasting relief.

This harmless preparation will dis-gest anything you eat and overcome a sour, gassy or out-of-order stomach five minutes afterwards.
If your meals don't sit comfortably or what you eat lies like a lump of lead in your stomach, or if you have heartburn, that is a sign of indigestion.

Get from your Pharmacist a 50-cent case of Fape's Diapepsin and take a dose just as soon as you can. There will be no sour risings, no belching of undigested food mixed with acid, no stomach gas or heartburn, fullness or heavy feeling in the stomach, Nausea, Debilitating Headaches, Dizziness or Intestinal griping. This will all go.

And, besides, there will be no sour food left over in the stomach; it poison your breath with nauseous odors.
Fape's Diapepsin is a certain cure for out-of-order stomachs, because it takes hold of your food and digests it just the same as if your stomach wasn't there.
Relief in five minutes from all stomach misery is waiting for you at any drug store.
These large 50-cent cases contain more than sufficient to thoroughly cure almost any case of Dyspepsia, Indigestion or any other stomach disorder.

CHAPTER IV.

The Duchess Approves.
His attentions to the Duchess of Breakwater had not been so conspicuous as to prevent the eager mothers—who, true to her word, Lady Galorey had invited down—from laying siege to Dan Blair. Lady Galorey asked him:

"Don't you want to marry any one of these beauties, Dan?" And Blair, with his beautiful smile and what Lily called his inspired candor, answered:

"Not on your life, Lady Galorey!" And she agreed: "I think myself you are too young."

"No," Dan refused, "you are wrong there. I shall marry as fast as I can."

His hostess was surprised.
"Why, I thought you wanted your fling first."

And Dan, from his chair, in which, with a book, he had been sitting when Lady Galorey found him, answered cheerfully:

"Oh, I don't like being alone. I want to go about with some one. I should like a fling all right, but I want to fling with somebody as I go."

The lady of the house was not a philosopher nor an analyst. She had certain affairs of her own and was engrossed in them and lived in them. As far as Lady Galorey was concerned the rest of the world might go and hang itself as long as it didn't do it at her gatepost. But Blair couldn't leave any one indifferent to him very long, not unless one could be indifferent to a blaze of sunlight; one must either draw the blinds down or back in its brightness.

She laughed. "You're perfectly delicious! You mean to say you want to be married at once and let your wife fling around with you?"

"Just that."

"How sweet of you, Dan! And you won't marry one of these girls here?"

"Don't fill the bill, Lady Galorey."

"Oh, you have a sweetheart at home, then?"

"All right," he assured her blithely, "rose, tall and straight and slender, and, come, rose and straight and slender, in fact, indeed she never failed to when there was any question of finding Blair."

Dan stood straight before the two women of an easy grace, and the American didn't suggest any line of ancestry whatsoever. His features were rather conglomerate; his muscles were possibly not the perfect elastic specimens that were those muscles whose strain and sinew had been made from the same stock for generations. It was nevertheless very good to look on. Any woman would have thought so, and he bent his blond head as he looked at the Duchess of Breakwater with something like benevolence, something of his father's kindness in his clear blue eyes.

Neither of the noble ladies regarded Dan as a good sort. His hostess thought him "a good sort," not half bad, a splendid catch, and the other woman, only a few years his senior, was in love with him. The duchess had married at eighteen, tired of her bargain at twenty-five. She held a telegram in her hand.

"We've got the box for Mandalay to-night at the Gaiety, and let's motor in."

Only Lady Galorey hesitated, disappointed.

"Too bad—I had specially arranged for Lady Grandcourt to drive over with fifteen. I thought it would be a ripping chance for her to see Dan."

When at length the duchess had succeeded in getting Dan to herself to ward the end of the day in the room, after tea, she said:

"So you won't marry a London beauty?"

And rather coldly Dan had answered:

"Why, you talk all of you, as if I had only to ask any girl of them, and she could jump down my throat."

"Don't try it," the duchess answered, "unless you want to have your mouth full!"

Dan did not reply for a second, but he looked at her more seriously, conscious of her grace and her good looks. She was certainly better to look at than the simple girls with their big heads, small white, long faces and, as the boy expressed it, "utter lack of get-up." The duchess shone out to advantage.

"Why don't you talk to me?" she asked softly. "You know you would rather talk to me than to the other girls."

"Yes," he said frankly; "they make me nervous."

"And I don't?"

"No," he said. "I learn a lot every time we are together."

"Learn?" she repeated, not particularly flattered by this. "What sort of things?"

"Oh, about the whole business," he returned vaguely. "You know what I mean."

"Then," she said with a slight laugh, "you mean to say you talk to me for educational purposes? What a beastly bore!"

Dan did not contradict her. She passed the soda fountain drug store and peeped in. It was dark and cool, and behind the counter the drug clerk mixed the summer drinks; and the drug clerk mixed them from that time ever afterward—for the girl with the yellow hair never showed up in Blairtown again. She went away!

CHAPTER IV.

In the Coral Room.
"Mandalay" had run at the Gaiety the season before and again opened the autumn season. Light and charming, thoroughly musical, it had toured successfully through Europe, but London was its home, and its popularity was chiefly owing to the girl who had starred in it—Lettie Lane. Her face was on every postal card, hand bill, cosmetic box and even popular drinks were named for her.

The night of the Osdone box party was the reopening of "Mandalay," and the curtain went up after the excitement of an outburst of applause. Dan Blair had never "crossed the pond" before this memorable visit, when he had gone straight out to Osdone Park, London theaters and London itself, indeed, were unexplored by him. He had seen what there was to be seen of the opera house in his own country, but the brilliant, perfect performance of a company at the London Gaiety he had yet to enjoy.

The opening scene of "Mandalay" is oriental; the burst of music and the tinkling of the silver temple bells and the strains of an orchestra, made Dan "sit up," as he put it. The theatrical picture was so perfect that he lifted his head, pushed his chair back to enjoy. He was thus close to the duchess. With invigorating young enthusiasm the boy drew in his breath and waited to be amused and to hear. The tunes he already knew before the orchestra began to charm his ear.

On landing at Plymouth Dan had been keen to feel that he was really stepping into a new world, and that the Dan Blair he had been daily, hourly "seeing life." The youngest of the household, his youth nevertheless was not taken into consideration by any of them. No one had treated him like a junior. He had gone neck to neck with the boys and had left the older ones behind him. He had been a guest, and been their diversion. In all his rare unpolished youth, Blair had been suddenly dropped down in an affable set that had whirled about him, and one by one out of the inner circle had called him to join them; and one by one, with all of them Dan had whirled.

Lord Galorey had talked to him frankly, as if he was Dan's father, and found much of the old man's common sense in his fine blond head. Lady Galorey had come to him in a mood of green jealousy, and no one but her young guest knew how badly she needed help. He had further made it known to the lady that he was not in the marriage market; that she could not have him for any of her girls. And as for the Duchess of Breakwater, she had been whirled with her until his head swam. He had grown years older at the Park in the few weeks of his visit, but now for the first time, as the music of "Mandalay" struck upon his ears, like a ripple of distant seas, he felt like the boy who had left Blairtown to come abroad. He had spent the most part of the day in London with a man who had come over to see him from America. Dan attended to his business affairs, and the people who knew said that he had a keen head. Mr. Joshua Ruggles, his father's best friend, whom Dan had left afternoon and left to go to his room at the Carlton, had put his arm with affection through the boy's.

"Don't look as though it were any too healthy down to the place you're visiting at, Dan. Plumbing all right?"

And the boy, flushing slightly, had said: "Don't you fret, Josh, I'll look after my health, all right."

"There's nothing like mountain air," returned the westerner. "These old fogs stick in my nostrils; feel as though I could smell London clean down to my feet!"

From the corner of the box Dan looked hard at the stage, at the fresh brilliant costumes and the lovely chorus girls.

"Gosh," he thought to himself, "they are the prettiest ever! Dore-gray, eyes of Irish blue, mouths like roses!"

He was looking forward a little toward the duchess he whispered: "There's not one who isn't a winner. I never struck such a box of dry goods!"

The duchess smiled on Dan with good humor. His native pleasure was delighted. It was like taking a child to a pantomime. She was wearing his air—hands and give them to the girl with the yellow hair. When he and his father came out together from the church, Dan chose the street that pleasure unaffected and keen. She could not believe that this young man was master of ten million pounds.

When Lettie Lane appeared Blair heard a light rattle like rain through the auditorium, a murmur, and the house rose. There was a well-bred calling from the stalls, a cry from the pit, and generous applause—"Lettie Lane—Lettie Lane!"—and as though she were royalty, there was a fluttering of handkerchiefs like flags. The young fellow with the others stood in the back of the box, his hands in his pockets.

"Lettie Lane!"—and as though she wasn't a girl in the chorus as pretty as this prima donna! Lettie Lane came on in "Mandalay" in the first act in the dress of a fashionable princess. She was modish and worldly. For the only time in the play she was modern and conventional, and whatever breeding she might have been able to claim, from whatever class she was born, as she stood there in her beautiful gown she was grace itself, and charm. She was distinctly a star, and showed her appreciation of her audience's admiration.

At the end of the tenor solo Princess Galorey runs into the pavilion and there changes her dress and appears once more to dance before the rajah and to prove herself the dancer he has known and loved in a cante in Paris. Lettie Lane's dress in her dance was the classic ballet dancer's, white as the leaves of a lily. She seemed to swim and float; actually to be breathed and exhaled from out her slim gown; and the only ray of color in her costume was her own golden hair, surmounted by a small coral-colored cap, embroidered in pearls. The actress bowed to the right and left, and then, right, she glanced toward the Duchess of Breakwater's box; acknowledged the burst of applause; began to dance and finished her pas seul, and with rolled hands sang her song. Her beautiful voice came out clear as crystal water from a summer rock, and words were cradled like doves, like boats on the boundless sea.

"From India's coral strand,"

But there was no hymn tune to this song of Lettie Lane's in "Mandalay!" To the boy in the box, however, the following in her former statement: "My former statement still holds good. The relief I obtained from kidney trouble by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills was permanent."

"Hello, little boy, what will you take?"

Blair giggled, quick to catch her meaning, and answered: "Oh, chocolate, I guess!"

And Lettie Lane laughed, put out her white hand, the one without the cigarette, and said: "Haven't got that brand on hand—so sorry! Will a cocktail do? All sorts in bottles. Higgins, fix Mr. Blair a Martini!"

As the dresser rose from her stooping position, the r of Lettie Lane's dressing-room unfolded out of the mist and smoke. On a sofa covered with lace pillows Blair saw a man sitting, smoking as will. He was tall and had a dark mustache. It was Prince Porlotowsky, whom Dan had already met at the Gaiety shoot.

"Prince Porlotowsky," Miss Lane presented him. "Mr. Blair of Blairtown, Mont. Say, Frederick, give me a cocktail, will you? It is ever by you."

"The Confession," that will be seen on Thursday, November 30, matinee and night, at the Soisson theatre, has created such a stir that all arrangements have been made with Samuel French, play agent in New York City, whereby this play will be produced in London next year. Previous to the play being presented in New York City, the British manager saw the copyright performance in London February 23. They were so interested that they sent a representative to see the New York premier. Negotiations are now pending through Samuel French for Australia, Germany, France and Italy.

THE BEST PROOF.

Connellsville Citizens Cannot Doubt It.
Doan's Kidney Pills were used—they cured.

The story was told to Connellsville residents.

Time has strengthened the evidence.

Has proven the cure permanent.

The testimony is now testimony.

The proof convincing.

It can be investigated by Connellsville residents.

Mrs. Lawrence Francis, 411 Tenth street, Connellsville, Pa., says: Doan's Kidney Pills cured me of a severe attack of kidney trouble about five years ago and I have had no return since. This remedy has also been used by other members of our family with the most satisfactory results. It never fails to bring prompt relief from backache and kidney disorders. I value Doan's Kidney Pills highly and am glad to recommend them to others who may be suffering with any symptoms of kidney trouble. (Statement given October 7, 1907.)

CONFIRMED PROOF.

On October 15, 1909, Mrs. Francis was again interviewed and added the following to her former statement: "My former statement still holds good. The relief I obtained from kidney trouble by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills was permanent."

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Straining, Swelling, Etc.

STOPS PAIN IN THE BLADDER, KIDNEYS AND BACK.

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say good bye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of urine; the aching muscles and pains in the back; the growing weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids or ankles; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and then despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles, that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $5.00 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you, entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, R-437 Luck Building, Detroit, Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it. No 2. Think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home.

Unique Historical Work Contemplated

The following from the Winnet (Connellsville) Evening Citizen refers to a work recently published there and just such a work as is now contemplated for Connellsville and Fayette county:

"A new work entitled 'Genealogical and Family History of the State of Connecticut' in four beautifully bound volumes, has just been published by the Lewis Historical Publishing Company, of New York and copies are now being distributed. In work is quite different from any work of its kind in the State in that it gives the ancestral records of a vast number of Connecticut families back to the immigrant ancestors, covering a period in the majority of cases of about three centuries. For this reason it is of permanent value and will grow even more valuable as time goes by."

The object of the publication is set forth in the introductory in comprehensive form under three heads as follows: First to present in concise form the history of Connecticut, to preserve a record of the prominent present-day people of the State; third, to present through personal sketches the relation of its prominent families of all times to the growth, singular prosperity and widespread influence of Connecticut. These objects have all been attained to a truly wonderful and remarkable degree. The work is printed on excellent paper and is profusely illustrated, containing scores of portraits from steel engravings and half-tones."

The work contemplated for Connellsville and Fayette county is by the same Lewis Historical Publishing Company referred to in the above and the same diligent care and thorough research will dominate the local work. The Genealogical and Personal History of Fayette County will be under the editorial supervision of John W. Jordan, LL. D., librarian of Pennsylvania Historical Society, Philadelphia, and Mr. James Hadden of Uniontown, whose broad knowledge of local historical events and pioneer families is too well known to need further comment. The entire expense will not be spared in making a publication a valuable work for reference. The value of family history and genealogy depends upon accuracy and the thoroughness of research in public and private records; also, upon the use of old and unpublished manuscripts, supplemented by a careful cleaning and compiling of information to be found in the various printed works in public and private libraries. It will be the aim of editors and publishers to utilize all such material connecting the names with the American progenitor, where possible, and present in a narrative form the family line down to and including the present generation, weaving in the military and civil services of the subject treated. With this end in view the co-operation of the citizens is solicited and necessary further comment. The entire expense will not be spared in making a publication a valuable work for reference.
